Intel Masters - Full Report

Posted by Myers at 09:49 24/12/2002.

My full report of the Intel Masters event that took place on Saturday 21st December is now up. Here's a snippet:

Looking at the setup it seemed fairly decent, blocks of six computers always useful if one goes down, however there was no separation between the spectators (people standing around) and the players themselves. You could sit right behind the player talking to him the whole time if you wished. Also fade to black was not on, and you were allowed to talk when you're dead. This is something they definitely should have sorted before the tournament.

All in all the tournament did not seem to be going too badly, which is what I thought until I spoke to DK. DK is never one to hold back his thoughts on anything... at all... ever. I won't repeat exactly what he said for obvious reasons, but basically when he arrived slightly late that morning they had not even finished setting up the network and were running way behind. The event was being plagued by continuous computer problems and everything was just being delayed further and further.

shotti theb0g 15:02 24/12/2002	depends what insurance he has, most people only have house insurance and so as it got stolen at the science museum he wouldnt get a payout for it, he would have to go to the people that run the museum, but im almost 100% sure that they cant be held responsible for thefts. so he will get little on (more likely) no compensation for it you fing theiving fs [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
akujii0r Infinity-eSports 15:05 24/12/2002	think that was merely an analogy not if he was insured or not go speak to fin Direct Line or somethin we dont wanna hear it [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
erk 15:08 24/12/2002	maybe if intel didnt waste such a huge amount of money on a total stack of se then people wouldnt have felt disdain and nicked stuff. no excuse for theft but the organisers clearly failed to get any respect [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
