UK Team Update

Posted by Dev at 23:00 27/10/2002.

Already it seems j0nb0y means business, speaking to him in irc earlier on tonight he asked if i would provide you lot with the following information about the UK team as a whole. Well here goes:

Players

A maximum of two players from any clan team may be selected for the national team.
Eight players will be selected for the team.
One player (from the selected eight) will assume the role of in-game captain and one player (from the selected eight) will deputise for this position.

Internet Connections

All players must be able to play via a broadband Internet connection (512k downstream or greater).

Applications

All players wishing to apply for a position in the team should send an email to the team manager stating their Counter-Strike history and reasons why they feel they deserve to be selected. Whilst most applicants will be shortlisted without applying manually I recommend everyone who wishes to be considered sends an e-mail to jonathan@neffgen.net to ensure they are officially shortlisted.

A few interesting points of discussion, one being the choice not to include ISDN cs players and the other only to have two people per clan in the squad. He went on to give me the following:

Saturday 2 November 2002

UK National Counter-Strike Team 2002-03 announced.

Monday 11 November 2002

Deadline for the end of the qualifiers for the 2002-03 Clanbase CS Nations Cup, the competition groups and final teams will be announced on or soon after this date.

Remember to check out the website for Team-uk.cs which should be operational as of tommorow and right here at UKTerrorist for all the information related to Team-uk.cs.

decrepit Croydon 23:06 27/10/2002	er no isdn wtf, that rules out half the UKs best players don't it? [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
iron 23:08 27/10/2002	errr, are you sure he doesnt mean just the people applying..or the people shortlisted too? If it is 512k only then like alex said, it rules out half of the decent players that could play for team uk [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
iron 23:09 27/10/2002	i suppose it is gonna give a broad range of players, and bring in some new talent though, especially that 2 person per clan thing, rules out having 4 i-es players and only a few others [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
shotti theb0g 23:09 27/10/2002	o 1st post i am such a winnarman [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
-m0o,Rob- 23:09 27/10/2002	doesnt matter how good you are, with 130 ping a considerably less skilled player can run rings around you with 60 ping, not to mention all the loss/choke, considering the opposite team will try and choose the wkest server for our team ;x [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
iron 23:09 27/10/2002	dont start that s on here please. [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
j0nb0y 23:11 27/10/2002	Unless players can play matches for the team on a broadband connection, they wont even be considered. This isn't a LAN competition and the purpose of the team is to do as well as possible. Having a broadband only team is a necessity for an inter-European net competition such as the Clanbase Cup. [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
decrepit Croydon	I see the logic behind it but i wuda thought that ppl like toomy, khaos, creg etc wud still be able to outplay cable

	T 23:15 27/10/2002	id imagine it was to do with finding an equal pinging server (if thats possible when your playing people from germany/spain etc) all need an equal standard of connection for that. [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
	Scara North & South 23:15 27/10/2002	If im not mistaken im sure its CB that stated the rules saying 2 players per clan..... Come manage us Dev :) [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
	iron 23:18 27/10/2002	I think the clanbase rule was that only 2 players per clan can play in any one game, not 2 players per clan be selected for the squad? [Comment: Report IP: Logged]

	Divvur 23:39 27/10/2002	Its a good move, I was on ISDN for about 2 years, and I was s, now I got cable I am slightly under average, it has been a big improvement. It isn't ruling out players who have ISDN, it is just saying they need to play @ a m8s house or a LAN cafe who does have it. Considering the games can be on servers thousands of miles away it makes perfect sense. I am sure Jonny will do a gr8 job, lets support him and leave him to it. The less PR we make him do, the more work he can do with getting the team ready! [Comment: Report IP: Logged]

	Nick^ 23:49 27/10/2002	"Considering the games can be on servers thousands of miles away it makes perfect sense." Well Telewest finally caved

Telewest's Blueyonder Problems For Gamers
By Paul Hillbeck
Thursday December 7, 2000

According to The Register today, Telewest have acknowledged the fact that their high-speed Blueyonder service is experiencing difficulties.

In the statement, Gary Jennings, of the Internet Operations division of blueyonder, said: "We are currently experiencing various issues with packet loss. This is affecting some aspects of the overall service, in particular it is affecting UDP [User Datagram Protocol] based applications such as gaming and real-time chat when the traffic to these services is passing through the areas affected."

Telewest spokesperson, Rachel Turner, said that it working hard to fix the problems, which she admitted were effecting some aspects of the service.

"We've identified issues which may mean that users experience some temporary interruption or slow down in speed. Telewest is working hard to resolve these issues," said Turner.

Whilst the problems affect all users in general, it is online gamers that suffer the most from the packet loss.

I'm in the Bradford area on 1Mbit and I get pings in the regions of 60-80 then after a short while spiking into the hundreds and freezing. Tis a shame, had NTL back in London (well still do, at uni house in bradford) and my Cable modem there on 512kb gives me pings sub 20 to any uk server mostly sitting on 10-15 absolutely love it. Oh well Telewest say its being resolved and is #1 priority. Anyone else on Telewest I advise you to post messages on their forum blueyonder.discussion.hi-speed blueyonder.support.access.hi-speed Btw these aren't urls but newsgroups, connect to them from MS Outlook via news.blueyonder.co.uk [Comment: Report IP: Logged] VespR 13:50 28/10/2002	Forgot to mention if we can get up to 250 Telewest subscribers to say their connection is faulty for online gaming it immediatly becomes their number one concern. Like I said post msgs on their forum, its the best way to contact and Tech Support there are really helpful. Sorry this has nothing to do with Team-UK :) GI in CB btw. [Comment: Report IP: Logged]

	m0rph- 14:27 28/10/2002	I'd take khaos as an exception to the isdn rule personally because hes worth having. Reason i'd take bob is 1. his skills and 2. his attitude to cs and the scene, he sets a great example of how top players should conduct themselves. [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
	m0rph- 14:28 28/10/2002	khaos = top uk fragger no doubt and because the team will have players who wont have all pld together it might be important to have someone whos capable to dominating teams single handedly. [Comment: Report IP: Logged]

For a scratch team, you want 8 people most likely to get results aganist their opposite number, and hope that they can cobble together some tactics fairly quickly....prolly gives AnnuM a good chance....Sarge / Liquid also very handy....gl Jonboy, hope you get it right! [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
	shads theb0g 15:31 28/10/2002	u either want the best 8 fraggers, best 8 cfgrs, or the best 8 pairs from say the top 4 teams that will have tp sorted between them and have plenty of tp experience to be able to mix in with the other pairs easily [Comment: Report IP: Logged]

Obi

Clan ONE
 03:48 29/10/2002

i wouldnt consider annum for teamuk for several reasons, 1) he has the one of the worst attitudes in the uk cs community, and i dont want to see the uk represented by such a stupid child
 2) fair enough hes good online, but i want to see it repeated on LAN, i dont think any player who hasnt proven themselves on LAN should even be considered. My team would be liq - lil - bl/khaos - keiju - m0rph - b0b - Bom dunno who id pick for my 8th, theres several possibilities, im gonna go get some sleep now :D [Comment: Report IP: Logged]

Dev theb0g 11:42 29/10/2002	Obi, its an online tornament, LAN play isn't needed so why wouldn't you pick someone unproven on LAN!? [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
m0rph- 14:40 29/10/2002	because dev u stupid fing penis they will have config hax and the last thing uk want is for their members to be known for using dodgy comms and s like finland were - now f off and rot u f [Comment: Report IP: Logged]

UK Team Update

Posted by Dev at 23:00 27/10/2002.

Already it seems j0nb0y means business, speaking to him in irc earlier on tonight he asked if i would provide you lot with the following information about the UK team as a whole. Well here goes:

Players

A maximum of two players from any clan team may be selected for the national team.
Eight players will be selected for the team.
One player (from the selected eight) will assume the role of in-game captain and one player (from the selected eight) will deputise for this position.

Internet Connections

All players must be able to play via a broadband Internet connection (512k downstream or greater).

Applications

All players wishing to apply for a position in the team should send an email to the team manager stating their Counter-Strike history and reasons why they feel they deserve to be selected. Whilst most applicants will be shortlisted without applying manually I recommend everyone who wishes to be considered sends an e-mail to jonathan@neffgen.net to ensure they are officially shortlisted.

A few interesting points of discussion, one being the choice not to include ISDN cs players and the other only to have two people per clan in the squad. He went on to give me the following:

Saturday 2 November 2002

UK National Counter-Strike Team 2002-03 announced.

Monday 11 November 2002

Deadline for the end of the qualifiers for the 2002-03 Clanbase CS Nations Cup, the competition groups and final teams will be announced on or soon after this date.

Remember to check out the website for Team-uk.cs which should be operational as of tommorow and right here at UKTerrorist for all the information related to Team-uk.cs.
