UKTerrorist LAN 5 - Final Standings

Posted by Ripper at 10:34 7/10/2003.

After another successful UKT LAN here's the final standings from the professional tournament:

- 1st: ONE (12)
- 2nd: Infinity-eSports (8)
- 3rd: section7 (6)
- 4th: Disturbed (5)
- 5th: 2s2p/Choke (4)
- 7th: Pacifico/Puk Kai (3)
- 9th: SCEE/ForsakeN/Croydon/qTp (2)
- 13th: O:i/n@s (1)

Good performances from 2s2p meant they took home a few points more than expected. Choke managed 5th, a slight improvement from UKT4, and Disturbed also improved from UKT4, but they'll still be disappointed with their loss to section7 after taking I-eS so close. Pacifico will be disappointed with their loss to section7 and would have expected a higher finish than 7th. O:i will feel hard done by after narrowly losing out to Pacifico in the first round, while SCEE will no doubt be ready to put m0rph in hospital after his no show. ONE add to their points received from UKT3 while I-eS get off the mark.

Our overall UKT LAN standings table has now been updated to reflect these results. Well played to all clans involved.

then u also got team with points like SFAL/reS/o:i Surely SFAL/reS/qtp should have got some pts from the amature tourney aswell?

The WORST thing about these 'merc' clans not just the odd merc brought in to help a team out save them not going, is the fact that alot of the time they take pts away from the tournament. Although deserved on the day, these clans have no intention of returning, are just one offs and have eating pts that would have gone to the other clans attending more often...like o:i, pro gamers, SFAL (dropped to ama tourney to allow one to play, lost out because of a 'merc' clan using players from the pro tourney and would have got some pts atleast giving them a shot at the finals!)

It's got holes all over unless u take a large number of clans into the finals that have attended your other UKT lans, helping swell the prize fund!

the teams that attend the finals should be the teams that have no problem overcoming the merc teams. It don't work out too badly for anyone in the end, merc teams help fill up the tournament when the "established" clans fold the day before the event

ferrers Sniper's Alley 12:59 7/10/2003	I do think that perhaps you should only have been able to play for one team over the course of the event. I think if you asked the teams that did play just for the one event with mercs they would be happy just for the fact of attending and playing and wouldnt really mind if they got the points or not. So maybe those points could have just been passed down the ladder to other teams who had made the effort to attend the series of events. [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
Fox ClanNEW 13:01 7/10/2003	lol DK, i only ever play in mix teams with people i know and get along with, that whys i havn't been in a "clan" for about a year. As you said yourself in another thread, its about having fun isn't it ? [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
a1ex^ 13:03 7/10/2003	I presume dNC get an automatic bye into the finals seeing as they are defending champions, does this mean there are only 5 teams being invited instead of 6 ? [Comment: Report IP: Logged] Katori Choke 13:05 7/10/2003	The "mercing" / "mix" side of UK LAN events is always gonna be an area of debate, In light of the fact that most people consider LAN results to have more weight than Online results. When a lot of individuals belittle clans with good online results but no LAN history, it raises the question of how much weight do the LAN results carry from teams who do not compete with their proper line ups or are simply a mix team?

Admittedly you have to accept the fact that clans can suffer being let down at the last minute by individuals and need someone to step in, which is better than them not playing at all, but that too can open the debate of rank/points legitimacy.

Something could do with being put in place, as has been discussed in the past, to stop this from happening, other than just better forward planning from Clans team members.

i think you should do something like.. every team on UKT add your members to their clan on this clan database thingy (the clan name below your name) on the website.
and each member not being able to be added to more than one clan, which is how it should be already.
and future UKTs only allowed you to play members that are listed in your clan list.

		and maybe we could recognise some of the members by face even if they try to 'help out' another clan. cos it's hardly unfair that you should use members that arent in your clan, cos it doesnt reflect your clan. you mustnt forget the point of clans. [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
