UKTerrorist 2003 LAN Championships 4

Posted by Myers at 14:15 15/6/2003.

Many of you have been asking me when UKT4 will be and today I can announce that UKT4 will be a 2 day event taking place on the 19th - 20th July at the Northampton IT-Centre.

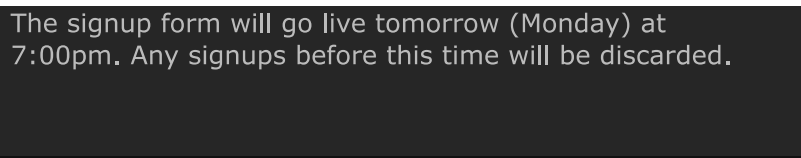

The first day (Saturday 19th July) will be a group stages event with 24 teams in 6 groups of 4 battling it out to make it through to the double elimination stage. The current top 4 teams in the UKT LAN Championships rankings that apply will be given a bye straight to the Sunday and will join the 12 teams that qualify from the group stages.

2 groups will run at a time with each team attending given a time to be at the LAN centre for. Due to fire restrictions once your group has finished we might ask you to leave. Those of you that have attended before are aware how crowded the centre can get. We are currently looking into accomodation for 80 or so players/spectators overnight, this might be an agreement with a local B&B or sleeping bag accomodation somewhere. I'll update as soon as I know.

We are considering running an allnighter on the Saturday night, however this would greatly rely upon interest. So let me know if you would like to attend.

Sunday will be the traditional 16 team double elimination, no explanation needed, except we will have to start earlier (8:30am) to ensure that players can still catch their trains and to give those that have work the next day a chance to get some sleep that night.

Despite this being a two day event the price will remain at £15 with the 6th player from a team only paying £5. Spectators will be charged £5 for each day they are in attendance. Anyone that would like to volunteer their services to help out at the event would gain free entry and would be greatly appreciated. These events are not the easiest to run and for a two day event we will need several admins.

players are so far spread it makes it impossible for everyone to attend especially as it's so far down south, maybe should look at having one in the mid-land's. There's not an awfull lot up here, there's unicon but thats 20 comp's and the only thing that ever happens there is 2v2's.

Myers Saviour of UKT UKTerrorist 18:07 15/6/2003	It wasn't only done on the poll just generally i didn't like 5th - 6th and 28th - 29th was too early, 12th - 13th i'm at ESWC, 28th - 29th was gonna be Lan-Europa. But that would now just drag us deeper into the holiday season. There's still 2 more events, so if you can't make this one i'm sure you can make one of the others. I'm currently thinking one in late August, one in late September, and final in November as not to conflict with WCG UK quals. DoZ prod, mill or fire will NOT be in the maplist. As for qualifiers for these events, it's something i'd love to do but could only be done online. I would like to be present at all UKT events and would not want to rounds trips in the U.K. Also their is a money factor, centres would like to receive at least as much money from these events as they would usually get in a day. The cost of regional qualiifers and then with the lack of money we'd subsequently take in at Northampton events makes the idea unfeasible. [Comment: Report IP: Logged]

I'll amuse you Jedibh...

In March 1997, Brian Crenshaw, a chemical engineer from West London, returned to the UK after spending the previous six months overseeing work at a petrochemicals plant in Nigeria. During his first week back, his wife complained that he seemed to have difficulty listening properly. Brian suggested that his ears had not fully recovered from the air pressure changes experienced during his flight. Over the next two weeks, Brian s condition worsened as he started to feel tickling sensations deep in his ears. Thinking the trouble was caused by loosened ear wax,he attempted to clean his ears with a ballpoint pen. When he pressed it into his right ear, he heard a cracking sound and saw the pen covered in a yellow goo. He went to his local GP claiming he had punctured his ear drum. The GP reached into Brian s right ear with a pair of tweezers and pulled out what appeared to be an insect antenna. During the examination Brian was horrified to learn that he had a total of 5 African ckroaches living in his head. Four ckroaches were alive and one ckroach was dead, presumably crushed by Brian s pen attack. An investigation revealed that when Brian was in Nigeria, a female African ckroach must have laid numerous eggs in the toiletries bag where he kept his cotton buds. When he was cleaning his ears, he was also transferring the ckroach eggs to his inner ear where they started to hatch.

On September 4 1999 at 9.30 am Ron Gupthey of N.S.W Australia went into hospital complaining of severe pain in the rectum area. The doctor on call examined him, he found severe swelling around the anus but was left puzzled because he had not seen such a thing before. Two more doctors examined and they too were left confused about what was happening. Rons health was deteriorating as the day wore on, he developed a fever and was suffering a lot of pain around his abdomen. The doctors gave pain killers but the symptoms worsened until 2.57 pm when he lapsed into a coma and 2 hours later was pronounced dead. An investigation was led to discover the reason of death. During the post mortem, traces of wood bark were found inside the rectal passage, but as the examination went further the doctor discovered about 3 or 4 black widow spiders in Ron s intestine. The police found a tree with a cut of branch along the side in Ron's back yard, there were traces of KY jelly and traces of rectal juices along the branch. There was also Black widow egg shells found inside the bark. Ron was apparently satisfying himself with this tree stump, but failed to notice the black widow nest on the tree. During his sexual act he had impregnated himself with the black widow eggs. The eggs had embedded in his rectal passage walls and were kept at the required temperature for the eggs to develop and finally hatch. Once the baby spiders were hatched they had bitten him and had poisoned him from the inside. Guess he was barking up the wrong tree...

As for the 5th - 6th it was my original plan to hold it then depending the poll didn't go haywire..but the problem was that is myself and 4k and omg!

SunShip 21:51 15/6/2003	The rules regarding merc teams at the present and mercing in general are fairly relaxed so there's plenty of opportunities to get a team together for this event. Actually that throws professionalism out the window from my point of view, Especially if these UKT series events are leading to a grand final. Just seems a little random that a clan form overnight get priority over established clans that have been running the circuit for some time. I think you should rethink the MERC team senario as its unfair and very unbalanced in a points system. Though my idea of what the UKT Lans portrays might be misjudged as i was under the understanding that UKT3 was a Esports world cup qualifier, Then UKT4 the Merc teams that were at 3 reform under a different name and its all of a suden a fun LAN or serious point system clan tournament?. Little confused here. I think entry should be Invite or online quals and all teams must be active in some kind of online league/ladder just my humble thoughts ;/ [Comment: Report IP: Logged]

Fox ClanNEW 21:53 15/6/2003	UK CS isn't ready to be professional, and all its online leagues are a joke [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
DoZ Anti-saviour of UKT 21:54 15/6/2003	merc teams turning up just for one tourny won't get into the finals, they won't get enough points [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
SunShip 22:05 15/6/2003	Its still unbalanced to the way we view zeNi's CLan ranking system. and of course saying pro gaming is non existant in the UK is very negative when Myers is organising a very professional tourney. I mean its not like i-series where you turn up plug in and wander around the network,. this is CPL style get in sort out your CFG and sens 5 mins warm up check fb work and go. Ok the prizes arent quite CPL and its still a bit of fun to the people that attend but i think Myers would benefit from being known as a person that can organise proffesioanl events and this slightly reflects negativly that the UK can aquire and execute pro organised clans in the first place. [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
Raider theb0g 22:12 15/6/2003	Rich, quick note on merc teams. I don't reckon a team should be able to play under their name and gain extra points unless they actually have 5 official team members there. I have nothing against a merc team coming, like under a new name with no points, but allowing a merc team to play, say for Last Chance (not saying that, just using an example team) and gaining them points is a little.....strange :) [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
Fox ClanNEW 22:12 15/6/2003	saying pro gaming is non existant in the UK is very negative realistic, nobodys making a living out of this, the top 4 can't even show up for half the events, thats not professionalism, its not taken quite seriously enough yet for that [Comment: Report IP: Logged]
Iccy 22:44 15/6/2003	I dont mind merc teams playing at UKT, but I think more established clans should be picked before them. With 30 teams also there are bound to be more dropouts, so perhaps have 'reserve' teams to fill in if needed? [Comment: Report IP: Logged]

UKTerrorist 2003 LAN Championships 4

Posted by Myers at 14:15 15/6/2003.

Many of you have been asking me when UKT4 will be and today I can announce that UKT4 will be a 2 day event taking place on the 19th - 20th July at the Northampton IT-Centre.

The first day (Saturday 19th July) will be a group stages event with 24 teams in 6 groups of 4 battling it out to make it through to the double elimination stage. The current top 4 teams in the UKT LAN Championships rankings that apply will be given a bye straight to the Sunday and will join the 12 teams that qualify from the group stages.

2 groups will run at a time with each team attending given a time to be at the LAN centre for. Due to fire restrictions once your group has finished we might ask you to leave. Those of you that have attended before are aware how crowded the centre can get. We are currently looking into accomodation for 80 or so players/spectators overnight, this might be an agreement with a local B&B or sleeping bag accomodation somewhere. I'll update as soon as I know.

We are considering running an allnighter on the Saturday night, however this would greatly rely upon interest. So let me know if you would like to attend.

Sunday will be the traditional 16 team double elimination, no explanation needed, except we will have to start earlier (8:30am) to ensure that players can still catch their trains and to give those that have work the next day a chance to get some sleep that night.

Despite this being a two day event the price will remain at £15 with the 6th player from a team only paying £5. Spectators will be charged £5 for each day they are in attendance. Anyone that would like to volunteer their services to help out at the event would gain free entry and would be greatly appreciated. These events are not the easiest to run and for a two day event we will need several admins.

I never said i would pick merc teams over proper teams. If there aren't 24 proper teams then I will resort to merc teams.

Also how do you define official members? players listed on their website?, cb profile?, ops in irc channels? if we're going to create some rules regarding this i'd want to take the complete plunge as suggested in my recently column.

I think it could get messy as some of the clans who are on the borderline for qualifying atm will almost certainly need to go to the rest of the ukt to guarantee qualifying. With the current rules, or lack of, fcc for example who have 3 players who cant go, could field a total merc team of 5 players and get away with it.

Admittedly thats an extreme, but its no different to what happened in the Xtra/iM situation. Xtra could easily have claimed iM's points when they folded, or didn't...

As you see, a bit of a kettle of fish that Myers is probably sensibly staying away from :)

A simple method for this event before such serious measures are imposed could be something like, if the player is known to play for another team, ie Harriman turning up to play for ui, then that player should not be allowed.

Dont think theres much you can do now, let this UKT series run its course and maybe tweak things if you decide to run it again. The only thing Id change personally would be to try and discourage "merc" teams, and also the mercing of players for teams. Dont know if you could simply say "if you play for one team at one event then you arent allowed to play for another team for future events" because its run over a lengthy period.

Using Shaq for example, he's played for 3 different teams at UKT events (Disturbed, OMG, 4k), but he was never "mercing" because he was an official member of all the teams at the time he played for them.

Its a tricky situation, glad I have no part in it at all :)

Well done Myers nice dates and the allnighter idea is great. Looks like we might finally get a ukt where alot of "unknown" clans get a chance to show their worth. (Will we actually finally see the great choke on LAN?)

Shame about the big clans who will struggle for a team due to
